EXCLUDING RITA

A psychoanalytic perspective on societys dysfunctional response to challenging behaviour of school pupils If we, as the teaching profession, can rise to the challenge of these insights, we will no longer continue to further abuse damaged children. We wont be aloofly delivering a curriculum to an address where they cannot live. We will be teaching effectively. We will see young people begin to be more in control of their less conflictive, emerging selves. We will see them beginning to own their acquisition of learning, skills, and sensibilities.
