

Real Life or Reel Life? Reflections of a Dancer and Choreographer

This book charts Geoffrey Cicheros progress from a shy boy to adulthood and how he transformed himself and became a major figure in the world of dance. The influences on his dance career are canvassed, as are his important contributions to the dance world and the impact of his choreographies. In essence the book provides a rare insight into Geoffrey's outstanding talent for, and love of, dance and choreography. Whether it be rave reviews Geoffrey received for particular choreographies, or for one of his final public performances in the Opera Theatre at the Sydney Opera House in 1979, describing how he and a colleague brought the house down in a production of one of Graeme Murphys ballets, there is something here for everyone inspired by the history of dance in Australia and by how the indomitable human spirit is able to triumph over adversity.
