Holly Heckerling is a single New Yorker whose stand-up comedy career doesn't quite pay the rent. To make extra money she'll do well, just about anything, from preparing tax returns to removing a cast for a desperate dancer. Holly's misadventures leave little time for love, but she finds herself drawn to two vastly different men: a mysterious writer who leaves his impassioned prose in Holly's pantry, and a single dad who is the personification of normal or is he? Contributing to the craziness are Holly's eccentric aunts and her cousin Gerry, whose obsession with famous people's footwear lands Holly in hot water. Holly's life is already spiraling out of control when Tallulah, a monkey with a penchant for pickpocketing, lands on her doorstep. Can she manage the meddlesome monkey while also balancing career and romantic entanglements or will she go bananas? Some things just can't be domesticated. Delicious as a jelly doughnut! Janet Evanovich. Attitude and eccentric characters abound in this rollicking novel. Publishers Weekly. With clever writing and an incredible sense of pace, Royce sets her novel apart from the multitude of chick lit books available on the shelves ... Witty, engaging and thoroughly entertaining, Royce's novel satisfies from the first page to the last. BookLoons. Monkey Love is heavy on slapstick comedy and mistaken identity, and continues its breathless and very funny pace right to the happy ending. Fiction Nation, XM Satellite Radio. The cute story of single New Yorker Holly Heckerling, struggling to get by with little money and dramatic friends. A little more interesting than the usual pink-cover heroine, Holly is a typist, a carpenter and one half of a comedy duo. Throw in a pickpocketing monkey and, as you might expect, chaos ensues. OK!
